

Kate Poels, Children's Author

Presenter's Biography :

Kate is a children's writer, book reviewer and creative writing workshopper. She also narrates audio books for Audible.

Her second book for children, Mima Malone and the Mad Bad Inventor, was published in the summer and she's been blown away by the support and response.

Having begun her adult life training as a nurse at Great Ormond Street Hospital and then moving to Reading, she took a teaching degree. She has worked in several primary schools, both mainstream and special needs, and continues to spend lots of time in classrooms and school halls one way or another.

She spends a lot of time attending writers' festivals, workshops and book events. She is a member of all sorts of fabulous groups such as the FCBG, Children's Book Circle and SCBWI (all worth googling).

She has two sprouting daughters Lily and Jemima, husband Will and the true head of their family....one utterly bonkers collie cross, Pippi.
